

About the workshop

The EuroMediterranean and Black Sea (EMBS) Observatory (www.mediterraneomarnero.it) is an international network organization constituted by local authorities, cultural institutions and various associations of different countries bordered on either Mediterranean Sea or Black Sea. Its mission is to promote peace along with economic and social development, mainly operating by concrete actions of solidarity and stimulating the multi-directional mobility and the reciprocal knowledge of the different people living in this area.

The main aims of the two days workshop in Procida are mostly to enlarge the network, involving new cultural, social and political institutions, and to strengthen productive relationships among the different members already joint to the EMBS Observatory. That's the reason why the major part of the meeting is organized in small working groups both to discuss on the opportunities offered by EU funding and to create multiple interactions for future project proposals.

The hopeful outcomes of the meeting, hence, should be a list of concrete ideas and active collaborations to give rise to a fruitful network of Euromediterranean and Black Sea institutions.

Venue

The course takes place in the bright scenery of Procida which is one of the beautiful islands of the Gulf of Naples.

The palace "Ex-conservatorio delle Orfanelle" is in the most ancient part of the island: Terra Murata.

This name derives from the ancient division of this part of the island in areas called "Terre" (lands) where inhabitants houses were built, in order to protect the area during dangerous periods. Interesting here is the Castle that is the first image the visitors can see arriving in Procida.
